The Wayne Stinchcomb Big Orange Melanoma Foundation has teamed up with the Melanoma Research Alliance (MRA). Since its founding in 2007, MRA has committed $131 million in funding to advance our understanding of this disease. MRA funds projects in the areas of prevention, diagnosis, and treatment, with the majority of funding allocated for melanoma treatment. This year we are again offering a great opportunity to promote your support in the fight against melanoma. Consider sponsoring our largest fundraiser of the year. This event draws over 500 local leaders, healthcare professionals, business corporations and community members.

In recognition of our contributions to the MRA, a Young Investigator Award was named after Wayne Stinchcomb and awarded over three years to Rachel Vogel, The University of Minnesota – Twin Cities, for her pilot study of intervention to reduce sunburns in melanoma survivors.
